

Salt: Preserving Against Decay through Education

As an educational institution rooted in God's Word, we affirm and promote a biblical worldview including philosophical positions explicitly and implicitly represented in the Bible. We hold a correspondence view of truth, that the laws of logic are necessarily true, that faith and knowledge are complementary, that there is objective right and wrong, and that the meaning of a text can be known through investigating authorial intent.

"We destroy arguments and every lofty opinion raised against the knowledge of God, and take every thought captive to obey Christ," 2 Corinthians 10:5

We affirm the following:

Truth is that which corresponds to reality;
reality is God Himself and His creation;
each thing exists according to its kind.

The laws of logic and rules of inference are necessarily true
and based on the nature of God.

Knowledge is properly justified true belief, possible because God created humans to know and the universe to be known.

Faith is belief, as cognitive assent,
and trust, as confidence in belief,
and does not exclude knowledge.

Right and wrong objectively exist, defined by the character of God;
the outcome of an action alone
does not define whether it is right.

The meaning of a text can be known through investigating authorial intent, including, but not limited to,
the meaning of the Biblical text.

These truths comport
with God's Word and Reason.
